Carter welcomes cabinet approval

RABI THANI 15, 1399 • VOL. XLIX, No. 14571

By WOLF BLITZER Jerusalem Post Correspondent

WASHINGTON. -- President Jimmy Carter yesterday welcomed the Israel cabinet's approval of all the remaining unresolved issues standing in the way of a peace treaty with Egypt. But he and other key administration officials braced for a sharp reaction from much of the Arab world. They began focusing on efforts to try to meet this challenge. Even before arriving back in Washington early yesterday morning, the president sent messages to several Arab leaders while still aboard Air Force One.

The president congratulated Prime Minister Menahem Begin and President Anwar Sadat, declaring: The peace which their peoples so clearly need and want is close to

Across the political spectrum, Carter's venture into shuttle diplomacy was halled. "I am pleased and relieved," said Republican Senate leader Howard Baker (Republican-Tenessee). "I think the president took a risk worth taking."

Overnight, the president's stan-ding among the American public has dramatically improved, according to experts here. Yet Carter and his chief aides, still tired from the exhausting shuttle, were not languishing in the victory. The Americans sense that difficulties in implementing the treaty and moving forward on the West Bank/Gaza autonomy scheme are bound to cause further headaches here in Washington. They also believe that their success could very easily have ended in failure.

"You are looking at a tired but grateful man.'' Carter told a crowd of some 1,000 cheering people, led by Vice-President Walter Mondale and the House and Senate leadership, at a tumultuous arrival ceremony at nearby Andrews Air Force Base. The president noted that "we have now defined all the major components of a peace treaty between the largest Arab country, Egypt, and her neighbour and former enemy, Israel. There may be sharp internal debates before this process is complete. But the treaty that emerges can be the cornerations of a comprehensive settlement, one that can bless with peace all the peoples who have suffered from the conflicts in the Middle East."

He noted that "through private messages and public statements, I am urging other world leaders to support what Egypt and Israel have done, for it offers hope to all who love peace everywhere in the world." (Full text — back page) congressional leadership to the White House for a full briefing on the trip to Egypt and Israel, including the extent of accompanying U.S. bilateral economic and military commitments to both countries. During the past few weeks, begin-

The amendment calls for the statute of limitations on murder to be abolished altogether. It is due to be debated in Parliament before the end of June. The statute, which prevents new prosecutions for murder after the lapse of 30 years, comes into effect on December 31 this year.

About 30 members of the opposition Christian Democratic Union (CDU) have said they will support the amendment. This makes a total of 245 votes. The law will require a majority of 250. But the draft is expected to win the approval of further deputies from the ruling parties and the CDU as internal party dis-cussions on the subject continue.

Weizman to U.S. today for bilateral talks

Defence Minister Ezer Weizman and senior Foreign Ministry and Treasury officials are flying to Washington today to negotiate with the U.S. government on aspects of a new memorandum of understanding between the U.S. and Israel that will accompany the peace treaty with

Israel's proposals in this connection were worked out over the past three days by a committee comprising Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan, Justice Minister Shmuel Zamir, Foreign Ministry Director-General Yosef Ciechanover and the ministry's legal aide Meir Rosenne.

At first the cabinet decided that Dayan, too, should attend the talks in Washington. But subsequently it was resolved that Dayan would not go to Washington at this stage. His spokesman explained that there would be legal discussions at first, at which his presence was not required. He would fly over later if the discussions became more politically

Another Foreign Ministry official explained, however, that the political discussions on the proposed memorandum of understanding would be held here in Israel, with Ambassador Samuel Lewis representing the U.S.

Egypt looks to Saudis as treaty evokes Arab fury

Post Mideast Affairs Editor As a torrential anti-Egyptian campaign swept through the Arab world in the wake of the breakthrough in the Israel-Egypt peace talks, Egypt's Vice-President Hosni Mubarak flew to Saudi Arabia last night in an attempt to win that country's influential support for the draft peace treaty.

Mubarak went to the oil-rich kingdom from Sudan, where he took a message from Egyptian President Anwar Sadat explaining the peace proposals worked out with U.S. President Jimmy Carter during Carter's six-day visit to Egypt and Israel.

West Bank pupils protest

Jerusalem Post Staff Hundreds of pupils in most major

West Bank towns and in East Jerusalem took to the streets again in attempts to demonstrate. Most of the attempts were blocked by security forces.

In East Jerusalem, school pupils gathered near the Kalandiya refugee camp and at the Old City's Damascus Gate and tried to organize demonstrations and roadblocks. They were dispersed by border policemen who fired shots over their heads.

In the morning, youths tried to persuade shopkeepers in the Old City's David Street - one of the main entances to the Old City — to close shop in protest against the latest peace developments and the military government's behaviour towards demonstrators. Several shopkeepers did lock up, but they were persuaded by Israeli authorities to reopen in the nflernoon.

Ofra men refuse to give up arms Jerusalem Post Reporter

Members of the Gush Emunim settlement of Ofra in the West Bank yesterday refused to surrender their arms to the IDF. The army demanded that the settlers surrender their arms after Ofra militants fired over the heads of demonstrating Arabs in Ramallah-El-Bira on Tuesday.

The army action against the Ofra settlers came as hundreds of pupils in most major West Bank towns and in East Jerusalem took to the streets again in attempts to demonstrate. Most of the attempts were blocked by security forces.

The army unit which came to Ofra yesterday morning also wanted to question those settlers who had been involved in Tucsday's attack on El-Bira Arabs.

But the Ofra settlers refused to reveal the names of those who were involved in the incident and also refused to surrender their arms. Later in the day, they met with the commander of Judea and Samaria. Tat-Aluf Binyamin Ben-Ellezer, to discuss the Impasse.

Letter now 'eases sting' Final cabinet vote on treaty set for Sunday

Prime Minister Menahem Begin did not have to work hard to get a walkover victory in the cabinet yesterday in favour of the compromise package with Egypt which will make the signing of a peace treaty possible. Fifteen ministers voted in favour.

Of the two remaining cabinet members, Transport Minister Haim Landau would have voted against the package but had to leave to attend the funeral of a close relative. Education Minister Zevulun Hammer did not take part in the vote, because he will not make up his mind until the cabinet discusses autonomy in Judea and

But least support in Begin's own Herut party

Decisive majority expected in Knesset for treaty

Post Political Reporter TEL AVIV. - The peace treaty with Egypt is expected to win at least as comfortable and decisive a Knesset majority as did the Camp David accords last autumn; and if all proceeds smoothly, the vote may be held on Monday.

But prior to the vote nearly all political parties have fixed a crowded schedule of meetings to adopt of-

Most parties, especially the small ones, will merely be going through the motions, as their support for the treaty is a foregone conclusion. The majority in the larger parties is also expected to back the peace pact, but the debate in those parties is ex-pected to be heated and is sure to accentuate internal divisions — and possibly even trigger defections. The stormiest confrontations are expected in Prime Minister Menahem Begin's own party, Herut. This is seen as one explanation why Herut has not yet set a date for its Central Committee meeting.

A political debate was averted at last week's Herut Central Committee meeting when Ezer Weizman read out a message in which Begin promised to convene the committee a eek later, after his return from the Camp David accords. Should Begin find a free day for the meeting, he is expected to turn the session into a personal test of confidence in himself - and will probably receive an overwhelming vote of support. This was how Begin handled the committee meeting following the Camp David accords.

Herut Knesset faction chairman Haim Kaufman said yesterday that a major issue will be the desire of many in Herut to be assured of the nature of the projected autonomy for the Arabs in Gaza, Judea and Samaria. He himself "would like to see such a definition, but can accept the idea of deferring a decision until after the treaty signing, and taking it

Kaufman said that if there are more than three defections in the Likud following the Knesset vote on the treaty, the bloc may seek new elections — to capitalize on the agreement but also to counteract the parliamentary loss. (MKs Geula Cohen, Moshe Shamir and Yigal Hurvitz are likely to bolt the Likud.) Herut's major Likud partner, the Liberal Party, has also not yet scheduled a meeting of any of its major decision-making bodies. But here the reason is quite different: all 14 Liberal MKs are expected to vote for the treaty and few within the party see any point in debating the

Only last week the Liberals' large party council met and came out overwhelmingly in favour of a peace agreement.

Liberal Knesset faction chief Avraham Sharir told The Jerusalem Post yesterday that "there is very little time before the vote, and so far the idea of calling party meetings has not been raised."

Sharir opposes any early discussion of autonomy as it "would put spokes in the wheels of peace. It's well known that our ideas on the subject don't mesh with those of the Egyptians or Americans, and it would be foolish to bring those differences into the open now."

MKs will support the treaty. The party's position paper on autonomy is very explicit in demanding that the autonomy apply only to people and not to territory, and that Jewish settlement in the territories be enabled to continue. At yesterday's NRP Knesset faction meeting the party's leaders made it clear that a cabinet decision close in spirit to the NRP's position on autonomy would reassure the party and enable the majority of its MKs to back the Education Minister Zevulun Hammer however cautioned that the cabinet's stand on autonomy might not be publicized, as this could harm the chances of signing the treaty. Interior Minister Yosef Burg praised the "tough stand by the prime minister" and characterized the peace treaty as "a prize for that stand." Vehement treaty opponent Haim Druckman, however, said he hoped for a miracle that would "do away with the present agreement." The Labour Party Bureau meeta tonight to draw up guidelines for the debate expected on Sunday, when the 400-member party Central Committee will decide how the party's MKs are to vote. The party is expected to draft a proposal of its own rejecting the government's autonomy plan. If that proposal does not pass in the Knesset, Labour MKs are expected to be allowed to vote as each wishes. Nevertheless a confrontation between hawks and doves is expected at the Labour meeting too, with the hawks trying to have the party make support for the treaty contingent on the government's accepting Labour's objection to autonomy as opposed to territorial compromise. Without Labour support the treaty has no chance, they Nevertheless, most Labourites are sure to support the treaty, as will most of the NRP MKs. In Herut, estimates differ and some predict greater opposition to the treaty than to the Camp David accords - when nine of the 19 Herut MKs opposed or abstained.

One Herut MK, Moshe Katsav, yesterday called for a referendum on the treaty, though his idea stands little chance.

But it is already clear that this budget, which goes into effect in two weeks. is already out of date due to the trea-

Some ILSb. was set aside in the 1979/80 budget for costs connected with a possible peace treaty. But it is now clear that IL20b, will have to be budgeted for costs next year connected with the military withdrawal from Sinai. Even though part of the cost of Israel's pullback will be covered by the U.S., there will be a need to reduce the population's buying ri -in order, as Ehrlich said two weeks ago, "to prevent a speedup of inflation.". The joint committee of the Defence Ministry's Mordechai Zipori and the Treasury's Yehezkel Flomin meets today to discuss the coordination of government operations in the Negev, to which the IDF will withdraw after handing Sinai over to the Egyptians. One topic they are sure to consider is the need to reduce all building in Israel outside the Negev during the reconstruction of Israel's defence

Industry and Trade Minister Gideon Patt has meanwhile appointed a committee within his ministry to look into the possibility of getting U.S. industry to make purchases in Israel, as part of the agreement on helping defray the costs of the pullback. The committee will also explore the idea of making massive purchases of equipment under the aid pact with the U.S. On the other hand, the idea is circulating in the Treasury of getting the Americans themselves to build the Negev airbases that will replace Israel's old Sinal ones - including having them bring in workers from abroad - in order to keep down in-

The Treasury is also thinking of asking the government to declare that all further state activities, such as the expenses that withdrawal will entail in the Negev, requires a cutback in other outlays. However, as it is clear that major cutbacks are not possible, the stress is likely to be laid on keeping government demand in the local market at its present level, with government buying balanced by a considerable increase in imports. These will entail a further worsening of Israel's balance of payments.

Treasury Director-General Amiram Sivan and Defence Minister Ezer Weizman are leaving for the U.S. this morning to present the American government with a detailed account of Israel's military and economic aid needs for the next few years. (It was not clear yesterday whether Ehrlich would be leading another aid delegation to the U.S. after the signing of the treaty. 1 The U.S. Israel aid agreement will be an adjunct to the peace treaty Israel is to sign with Egypt. In contrast with what happened at the Camp David "framework for peace" talks (when Prime Minister Menahem Begin agreed to withdraw from all of Sinai without getting any commitment on covering the costs). Jerusalem is now interested in having the economic aspects of the withdrawal recognized when Israel, Egypt and the U.S. sign the peace

Israel is asking the U.S. for $4b. over the next few years, over and above the $1.8b. yearly in military and economic ald it has been receiving. The size and scope of the U.S. military aid will be determined by the U.S. Israel treaty that will accompany the peace agreement, and will be Weizman's province. Justice Minister Shmuel Tamir and Foreign Minister Moshe Davan will draw up the other terms Israel seeks from the U.S. — which will include a U.S. undertaking to assure Israel of a supply of fuel.

expected here this week with a team of military officials to continue those talks. Iarael has been assured by Carter of strong U.S. support in relocating the Sinai defence line to the Negev following the withdrawal. Specifically, Israel is asking Washington to provide $3b. in extra military aid to pay for two new Negev airbases (which will replace those in Sinal) and the transfer of the defence line.

The Egyptians will also receive additional military and economic ussistance, although probably not as much as they have sought.

White House press secretary Jody Powell, during a briefing Tuesday in Cairo, signalled the administration's intention to move ahead in these areas. He told reporters that America's economic and military relations with both countries are likely to be more "productive" in peace han in war.

Republican leader Howard Baker said: "Whatever the cost, the cost of peace must be weighed against the cost of war." Senate Majority leader Rubert Byrd (Democrat-W. Virginia) said: "War, international terrorism, economic disruption. assassinations, civil unrest, social turnioil, oil embargoes and chronic anxiety have been a few of the costs of that conflict."

Sen. Richard Stone (Democrat-Florida), chairman of the foreign relations subcommittee on the Middle East, said the U.S. should provide increased economic assistance to Egypt if other Arab nations reduce aid to Sadat. "This assistance would be less costly than another round of major war," he said, reflecting a common theme heard yesterday. The chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, Sen. Frank Church (D-Idaho), was pleased by the latest developments. It's wonderful news," he said of the Israel cabinet's action yesterday. "I think it foreshadows a vote of approval by the Knesset after a strong and passionate debate. The government of Israel, after reflecting, has seen it is the strong sentiment of the Israelia themselves, and is now prepared to support the peace negotiations."

But Church expressed strong opposition to the administration's pending $60m. economic aid request for Syria, which has condemned the peace treaty. "I have reached the point where I can no longer accept this doling out of money," he said.

Ship on Fatah mission stopped by naval patrol

Jeruniem Pest Reporter

Israeli naval vessels recently stopped a cargo ship on a mission for the Fatah terrorist organization, the army spokesman announced yesterday.

The spokesman said that the 10man crew of the ship Ginan had been detained for investigation. He would not say when the incident took place. A list of the arms on the ship suggests that at least six terrorists were on board, but the spokesman would not comment on this point. Asked whether the terrorists had been killed, the spokesman said:

Gman, registered in Cyprus, left Tripoli in early February for Israel's coast "with the aim of transporting a terrorist squad...to an attack." The ship carried a rubber dinghy which might have been used by terrorists to reach the coast.

The ship also carried an RPD machinegun, two Russlan-made Kalashnikov assault rifles, three American-made M-203 assault rifles/grenade launchers, two American anti-vehicle Law rocket launchers, pistols, explosives, handgrenades and camouflage unforms, the statement said.

But it encountered difficulties "and was forced to change its course and sail away from the country's shores," the spokesman said. He reported that Israeli naval vessels. on a routine patrol, stopped it, took it to Haifa and discovered the arsenal.

An IDF spokesman denied a UPI report from Tel Aviv that the terrorists had intended to send the rubber dinghy loaded with explosives into Haifa Port and blow it up by remote control.

It had been zoned for construction of housing for refugees from the Gaza Strip, he said. Only after the construction plans were published had the land been claimed by the Zourobs.

The spokesman admitted that part of the vegetable crop had been destroyed "as a warning," but dis-missed the H-2.5m. figure as "absolutely absurd.

Move to Nazareth

Jerusalem Post Reporter UPPER NAZARETH. - In the past two months, 180 families - including immigrants, veteran Israelis and young couples — have moved here. More than 100 of the families are immigrants from the Soviet Union and Argentina. As a result of the influx, there is a shortage of housing in several quarters of the town. The municipality recently decided to raise taxes on houses and flats by 60 per cent and on businesses and banks by 100 per cent.

revolutionary militia drove off an assault by an estimated 500 unidentified armed men on an army barracks in a Kurdish area near the Iraqi border Tuesday night, newspapers reported yesterday.

The reports described the attackers of the Jaldian barracks as "anti-revolutionary elements." They did not mention any casualties.

Firing squads executed another five persons yesterday. An army general and four more policemen of the shah's regime were shot, bringing to 48 the number of executions ordered by Islamic revolutionary courts for political offenders.

General Akbar Ghaffarian, commander of the armoured brigade in the southwestern garrison town of Dezful, was the 15th of the shah's generals to die by firing squad since the revolution which toppled the monarch last month

Death sentences decreed by Islamic revolutionary courts have so far been carried out on 64 people -48 for political offences such as killing anti-shah demonstrators or torture, and 16 for sexual crimes. Three policemen were beaten to death on their way to court by angry crowds in the southern town of Najafabad.

They said Ambassador John Graham explained to a 12-man delegation, which included two mullahs (Moslem clergy), that entry regulations could not be changed. but that he would try to ensure that procedures were streamlined. The demonstration, the first here against Britain since the embassy was set on fire in anti-shah rampages last November, followed a dispute over alleged ill-treatment of some Iranians arriving at London's

The Foreign Ministry denial, broadcast by the "Voice of the Revolution," national radio, followed a report in the newspaper 'Ayandegan'' which said rumours that Sanjabi, 74, might have resigned were sparked by his absence from the ministry for several days.

Congress backs new mode for

U.S.-Taiwan links

WASHINGTON (Reuter). -Congress has overwhelmingly endorsed President Carter's plan to handle U.S. relations with Taiwan on an unofficial basis, following diplomatic recognition of China.

But in approving bills setting up the new U.S.-Taiwan relationship it added strong language on Taiwan's future security and pledged to continue to supply defensive arms.

President Carter originally said such language was not necessary. But its inclusion in the bill drew broad support and led to Tuesday night's final votes on the legislation of 90-6 in the Senate and 345-55 in the House of Representatives.

Although the two bills are essentially similar, numerous differences in language must be reconciled by a Senate-House conference committee before a final version can be sent to the president for signature.

The action clears the way for the U.S. to set up a so-called non-governmental body on Taiwan to handle future cultural, trade and other relations in the absence of an embassy. Taiwan's relations will be handled by a similar body in the U.S.

Fighting between the two Yemens ends with truce

BEIRUT (UPI). - Arab League mediators say the border clashes between North and South Yemen have ceased and the two countries are moving to re-establish normal relations.

Abdel-Aziz Bouteflika, the Algerian representative on the mediation committee, said on Tuesday: "We succeeded in putting an end to the fighting."

He also said North Yemeni president Ali Abdullah Saleh and South Yemen President Abdel Fattah Ismail had agreed to meet in Kuwait on March 28 to work out details of a long-range settlement.

The Iraqi news agency said the borders between the Yemens were re-opened on Tuesday and telephone communications restored. The agency also said military leaders of the two countries would meet today to arrange troop withdrawals.

The reports of the conciliatory moves followed 18 days of tension on the poorly defined Yemeni border. The tension prompted the U.S. to dispatch the aircraft carrier Constellation to the Persian Gulf area in a show of support for the conservative North Yemenis.

WASHINGTON (Reuter). -American newspapers were vocal yesterday in their praise for President Jimmy Carter's contribution to the success of the Middle East peace negotiations between Israel and Egypt.

"The Washington Post" said in an editorial that an Egyptian-Israeli treaty, if ratified, would not end all tensions between the two longwarring nations.

The newspaper praised Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israel Prime Minister Menahem Begin for contributing to a breakthrough in treaty negotiations but said the breakthrough could not have been won without the "transcendent vision and steadiness" of President Carter.

"Peace between Israel and Egypt assuming that it comes, will in large measure be President Carter's gift, the newspaper said.

"The New York Times" said — "A nation struggling to regain confidence and resist the desperate counsel that only force commands in Iran than a Cuban Bay of Pigs invasion or another president's tough response to North Korean hostility. More than some of his aides, Carter understood the realities _ that inspiring Israel's trust in the U.S. was more important than manipulating American arms and aid, and that Sadat was moved by realism." "The New York Daily News" said: new obstacles might yet arise before the final treaty could be signed, but whatever happens in the immediate future, Carter deserves round of applause for his patience, and persistence in pressing for peace . at considerable political risk to

Stronger British backing seen for Palestinians in ME policy

By HYAM CORNEY Jerusalem Post Correspondent

LONDON. — There are renewed fears in some local Jewish groups that Britain may be adopting — or at least preparing the ground for adopting — a policy on the Middle East that more openly favours the Palestinian cause. Following comments made in Riyadh last month by Foreign Secretary David Owen, who said that Britain would not favour an Egyptian-Israeli treaty if it turned out to be "exclusive and bilateral, Owen's No. 2, Minister of State Frank Judd, has now said in a speech in Cambridge that an Egypt-Israel agreement "can never be a substitute for a comprehensive settlement to which all those who have a stake in the area are committed.'

The Foreign Office is denying that there is any departure from policy. as it did with the Owen comment made during the queen's visit to the Persian Gulf states. A spokesman told The Jerusalem Post on Tuesday made on the Middle East in the par-couple of years, "an integral parhas been the resolution of the Palesti nian problem." He conceded that a the Middle East is so much in the news and as both Owen and Judd at .: companied the queen for part of he tour to the gulf states, "we are just a saying it more often."

In his Cambridge speech, Jud. said that "to believe that lasting peace in its most positive sense ca be achieved while the Palestinia issue goes unresolved is to fall if face realities. The facts of explosi political deprivation are there for a to see in the refugee communities Lebanon, Jordan and the West Bank tackle the hot potato of Israeli settle ment in Arab territory.... The agency said the plants would be shut for about a month, and if repairs were needed to ensure against radiation leaks in the event of an earthquake, the closures would be longer. The decision followed evidence that the computer programmes used to determine the safety of the plants contained some incorrect assumptions.

Call in U.S. to re-introduce the draft

WABHINGTON, - An impassioned public debate la gaining momentum here over whether compulsory military service abouid be reintroduced for America's young peo-

Advocates of the idea range from the far right to at least the liberal centre, a slightly uneasy alliance of cople who want different ends but the same means...

Libertarians are already reaching for the Constitution, branding any form of compulsory service as "involuntary servitude," and denouncing it as regimentation more normally associated with totalitarian

However, the impetus for reintroducing the draft comes on the political right from a desire to beet up the present all-volunteer armed services, as well as from a growing despair among liberals about a lack of idealism among the young. Liberals also fear that social classes and ethnic groups are growing inressingly apart.

When Nixon abolished the draft in 1972, it had been selective and predominantly caught the poor and blacks, while rich, white, middleclass youths escaped into the univer-sity campuses. The comparison of casualties in Vietnam between different groups was condemnation enough of the draft's iniquities.

However, since then the proportion of blacks in the all-volunteer armed services has grown. By next year blacks will account for 45 per cent of all the junior enlisted people everyone pulled together.

NE WHO THINKS along these lines is Charles Peters, editor of the

"Washington Monthly," which was founded 10 years ago in the belief that there was something basically wrong with the American system of government. He now says that conscription would not only fill the ranks of the military, and in a civilian form help care for the old and the sick and get the dirty jobs done, but also throw young people together in a wholly beneficial way.

In essence, a young man from Alabama or the Bronz could find himself in the next bed to a Kennedy

without having to get to Harvard

A Republican congressman from California has drawn up four and 65 per cent of those with six or that at least all young people should more years' service. And, despite the higher wages paid to volunteers, all four services (Navy, Army, Air Force and Marines) falled for the first time to reach their recruiting targets in the last quarter of last

Poor educational standards and lack of useful skills also concern the military establishment. One in 20 recruits coming into the army is a 'functional illiterate," and cannot follow training manuals or written instructions. Such recruits are given a six-week course to bring them up to the reading standards of an average

At the same time a new level of highly sophisticated military hardware is about to be introduce To enable recruits to cope with this new weaponry, the Army is introducing millions of dollars worth of audiovisuai equipment, comic-book style manuals and highly simplified

A compulsorily drafted crossction of American society would whatever the turnover problems — improve educational and skill levels immeasurably. One cynic remarked that elderly right-wingers calling for the draft are terrified of having to rely on poor, black kids to defend them in the next war.

Some who do not yet wish to go the whole way with the draft, believe categories of public service from which young people could choose: two years military training, six months active duty followed by 51/2 years in the reserves, one year's be required to register so that they could be quickly drafted in the event community service, or a lottery which could make them liable to of war. At the moment it is estimated military draft any time until they that it would take 65 days to produce were 26.

Opponents of the draft accuse men like Peters of not having thought through the implications. If the draft the first drafted man, by which time the Russians would be home again. The idealistic argument for the is compulsory, then people who refused it would have to be jailed or draft is that America is becoming a more self-centred society, and offers its children little that is either noble deprived of some of their rights. (It has been suggested, for example, or dangerous. Middle-aged liberals that they might have their driving look back nostalgically to World War licences confiscated.) Do Americans II - in much the same way the really want to return to the British do - as a period when divisiveness of the Vietnam period. when draft-dodgers fled to Canada and Sweden or were imprisoned?

The American Civil Liberties Union brands conscription as "a severe infringement of civil liberties." A "Washington Post" columnist, attacking Peters, wrote ironically, "Draft everyone, put the shirkers in jail. That will teach the little bastards some patriotism."

But support for the draft is growing, and the debate, which has already had one airing on the floor of the House of Representatives Armed Services Committee, is only just beginning. The "Washington Star" concluded a major editorial on the subject: "A national service system could invigorate an under-used national resource, the mental and physical energies of the young." Put like that, it is a sentiment that will attract a lot of backers.

It will take two to three months to complete work on the new corruption laws, but when they are ready Western analysts consider the new laws could be a devastating instru-ment in the government's hands against political opponents.

THE SHIA "revolt" gathered momentum last week when the leader of the Central Ulami Organization, the principal body of Shia religious leaders, Said Nasirul Ijtehad, announced that Shias would begin a "mass agitation" and were considering withdrawing from the Ideology Council.

Earlier, sitting cross-legged on the thickly-carpeted floor of a Shia religious school in the densely packed bazaar area of Rawalpindi, I listened to the leader of the Rawalpindi Shias read their statement warning they would resist with life and limb.

Sitting beneath a portrait of Iran's Shia leader, Ayatoliah Khomeini, Muzaffar Ali Shah said their prin-cipal objection was to zakat, a partly compulsory and partly voluntary Islamic welfare tax which Zia proposes to introduce in July. According to the Shiss, zakai has to be an individual act of conscience and can never be levied compulsorily by the

However, the Shias are not alone in fearing that much of the welfare money will find its way into the pockets of officials. How serious the Shia threat is remains to be seen. In Pakistan the Shias have never had a political party. Now, for the first time, they have a motive for forming one. welfare of all Ghanaians and make life enjoyable in the rural areas. All of which is just what the crowd had come to hear.

BUT HE EARNS his biggest cheer when he says that, if elected, the UNC will deny the military the right to interfere in the political affairs of Ghana ever again.

Blame for the country's inflation 60 per cent in six years - its collapsing currency, empty shops and shortages of everything, is fixed firmly on the army. Oforl-Atta's plan is to come to an agreement with every sector of society that a total work stoppage will occur should the

The UNC is a broad-based coali-tion that just might be capable of making that kind of agreement. Right, left and centre politicians make up its ranks. To hail Willie Ofori-Atta as ' is a little premature, but the UNC has come into existence through the belief that government by consensus will offer Ghana the best chance of recovery. The party makes great play of being "clean," a slap at its main op-ponents, the Popular Front and the People's National Party. The leading figures in both these parties are at present banned from holding office after investigations by official commissions.

Two leading Popular Front figures affected by the ban are Victor Ownsu and J.H. Mensah, who were both prominent in the pre-1972 civilian Government of the late Dr. Kofi Busia. The Popular Front is in some ways a rebirth of Busia's Progress

Although officially banned for the Tast seven years, the Progress Party managed to keep much of its organization intact. The Popular Front will largely inherit this organization and if it can solve its embarrassing leadership problem, it offer a new beginning.

is in with a strong chance.

THE THIRD main contestant - the People's National Party — consists of followers of Kwame Nkrumah, Ghana's first president, who was deposed in a 1966 coup. This party. which also has some organization intact, is led by Imoru Egal, who is also banned from holding office.

Nkrumahism is enjoying something of a re-birth in Ghana, but while Ghanalans like the messianic qualities that Nkrumah brought to the presidency, there is also a feeling that his over-spending is still today the fundamental cause of the country's problems.

The choice before Ghanaians is Busia's followers, Nkrumah's followers or a new party such as the UNC. In all 17 parties are in the race. If the UNC can build up its organiza-tion in time and keep its coalition together it will take some beating.

Ghana has the mark of a potentially rich country that is badly managed. There are some able people in all the parties and the hope is that people of ability will come to the top and reverse the years of decline.

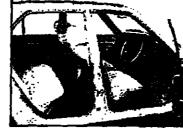

For the new president a key task will be to dispel the myth that he is a new messiah who can provide instant solutions to all problems. But if he can keep his feet on the ground when all around want to crown him "king" then the new president will

Davis Cup showdown in Germany tomorrow

By JACK LEON Post Sports Reporter

TEL AVIV. - Shlomo Glickstein will make his bow as Israel's No. 1 Davis Cup singles racquet in the thirdround European zone tie against West Germany starting in Augsburg. West Germany, tomorrow.

The choice for the second singles player lies between U.S. based professional Steve Krulevitz, who made his Davis Cup debut for Israel iast March with two singles victories against Austria, and Yair Wertheimer, a veteran of 10 cup matches and at present studying in the U.S. The fourth member of the side is Ilan Sherr, with Yosef Stabholz as non-playing captain, and Abba Cegla team manager.

The Israelis start as rank out-siders in this "David and Goliath" contest. While West Germany is one of Europe's strongest tennis nations, and in 1970 finished as runner-up to the U.S. in the Davis Cup, Israel's modest record in the competition includes only seven victories in 32 out-

Israel's team is now undergoing a week's intensive training at the 3,000-seat Augsburg Hall, practising six hours a day on the special carpet that will be used for the three-day match.

Stabholz will only name his second singles player when the draw for the tie is made late this afternoon, Israel Tennis Association chairman Avram Feiger told The Jerusalem Post

Glickstein, 21, who has registered three singles wins in four Davis Cup outings, has assured himself the No. 1 spot, following a series of fine performances during the past year.

After only nine months of occasional competition on the Association of Tennis Professionals circuit, he is already ranked 290th in the world by the ATP, which includes more than 500 players in its singles computer rankings. Glickstein defeated Krulevitz last autumn in the final of the Israel national championships at Ramat Hasharon, and he was placed first in the ITA's 1978 men's singles rankings, ahead of Krulevitz, and with Wertheimer and Sherr bracketed in third place.

In contrast, Krulevitz, 27, has fared badly since his auspicious debut for Israel against Austria, and he has dropped from 135th to 202nd in the ATP singles rankings during the past 12 months.

Former local No. 1, Wertheimer, 24, has represented Israel in 10 Davis Cup ties, winning six singles matches and four doubles. He has achieved some good results in intercollegiate tennis while studying at the University of California at Berkeley including a victory over top U.S. junior Larry Gottfried.

However, Stabholz may well still opt for Krulevitz in the singles, leav-ing Glickstein and Wertheimer to resume their brilliant Galea Cup partnership of 1975, when they won three of their four doubles matches in the men's under-21 world team championship, known as the "Junior Davis Cup."

Israel has reached this stage of the 1979 Davis Cup without in fact hitting a ball. Following a bye in last August's opening round, Nigeria withdrew from its scheduled tie here in September at the last minute, giving as their reason "circumstances beyond our control."

SOCCER-PREVIEW

TEL AVIV. - The quarter-finals round of the State Cup games takes over from league fixtures in this weekend's soccer programme, with the game of the day at the Bloomfield Stadium in Jaffa between Tel Aviv Maccabi and cuphoiders Netanya Maccabi.

Tel Aviv Maccabi have experienced a disastrous run in the league in the past weeks, during which they have lost four games, and not always to the best teams in the land. On paper. Vicky Peretz. Moshe Schweitzer, Avi Cohen and Yaron Oz, to name only a few, are among the top players in the country, but the fire seems to have gone out of their play. Will their enthusiasm be rekindled in cup games, and especially when facing the cupholders?

Netanya Maccabi produced perhaps their best game of the season in Jersualem last week, but were unlucky in not besting Jerusalem Betar. The Machness brothers, Oded and Gad. Moshe Gariani and Haim Bar had good games, and defence of the trophy may well produce fine performances this week. No result would come as a surprise, and after 90 minutes, the teams may still be level pegging. Last year's cup finalists. Bnei Yehuda, appear to have an easier task, playing at home to Rishon LeZion Hapoel. Bnei Yehuda lost only their second game this season when going down 0:1 to Yehud Hapoel last Saturday. Bnei Yehuda have conceded only half the goals given away by Rishon, and at home must be favoured for a comfortable win. Punters scanning the fixtures for a surprise result may be rewarded in Petah Tikva. Second Division Petah Tikva Hapoel entertain National League leaders. Jerusalem Betar. The home side is one of the most im-

FANS IN ACRE should be treated to an interesting game, with the visit there of Tel Aviv Betar, Tel Aviv Betar's veteran Moshe Romano played a blinder in Kfar Sava last week, in which he scored two goals. While in this form it is difficult to see Betar losing in Acre, but the home side's enthusiasm may give the National League visitors a really

Prompt China reply to IOC Lord Killanin sent cables to sports

PEKING (Reuter). - Peking advised the International Olympic Committee yesterday that it was ready to meet Taiwanese sports officials on March 27 to discuss who should represent China in the world sporting movement.

The New China news agency said that Zhong Sitong, president of the Chinese olympic committee, yesterday sent a cable to Lord Killanin, president of the IOC, accepting his proposal that the talks be held.

Zhong's message said "agree to meet in Lausanne on March 27," the news agency said.

THE DANGERS of taking too long over celebrating a score were brought home to Greek soccer team PAOK recently. In a league match against Ethnikos, PAOK conceded a goal while aix of its players were still congratulating each other on a goal in the opposition half. Ethnikos restarted the game, with only five PAOK men facing, and - inevitably - scored. The Greek Football Association ordered the game, a 2-2 draw, to be replayed.

The surprise team of the season in Chile was Cobre Loa, from the northern copper mining town of Chuquicamata: the club finished second in the league in its first-ever season in the First Division. Saving pedestrians

Road accidents are again on everybody's mind. For some years their number has remained steady, with about 639 dead, half of them pedestrians. What is so irritating is the recent recurrence of accidents in which whole families are decimated, writes Judge H.S. LOWENBERG. h the long-time chairman of the National Council for may be the Prevention of Accidents.

As a judge, let me start discussing the subject from the aspect of law enforcement. I want to state right away that our traffic laws are totally is League in adequate. There is no need for any new laws. Perhaps, there are too

In the end, therefore, traffic will have to be a self-regulating operation. This means that what is actually happening now, will have to be extended: Drivers have to watch themselves to be careful, and in exting Val: treme cases others will have to 2. office of he watch them to observe the laws and safety regulations. cent of all persons involved in accidents. What is more, pedestrians are very often to blame for the accident; they are the prime cause. The trouble is that it is easier to "get at" the driver and to take his licence number, than at the pedestrian, who has no such number. The result: we try to educate and re-educate the driver, rather than

That is obviously wrong here in Israel, where half the accident victims, and over half of all those involved, are walkers. We must reach out to them, with education, propaganda and guidance.

The National Council for the Prevention of Accidents will in the next month put the weight of its educational efforts on the walker.

Another word about drivers. In the last three years the rate of killed and injured has been brought down through the use of seat belts. Until 1975, when seat belt use on interurban roads was made mandatory. about 750 people were killed every year. Then the figure dropped to 630, and it has remained at that level. The means of saving about 100 lives each year has been a technical one.

Now that we are probably facing the need for fuel economy, we may have to enforce speed limits - those limits which have been the law for 15 years and more: 80 kph on highway roads (90 kph on speedways) and 50 kph in towns. It is common knowledge that this law is not being observed.

When speed limits were introduced in the U.S. and Europe after the oil embargo of 1973, accidents dropped so fast that fatalities in the U.S., for instance, dropped by a clear ten per cent. So long as the speed limits were observed, fatalities stayed down. In recent times they have gone up again - as speed limits were allowed to go up. Everybody should know that even the fastest car operates at the greatest fuel economy when driven at 70-80 kph. Above and below those speeds, the engine uses more fuel. So, when petrol gets more expensive, and perhaps more scarce too, why not adjust speeds accordingly?

In the end it is up to us drivers to attain the best car performance and the safest way of driving. As Shakespeare said: "The fault, dear Brutus, is in ourselves, not in our

LINCOLN MERCURY

During his visit in Cairo President Jimmy Carter used this custombuilt open Cadillac. In Jerusalem, where he arrived at night, he travelled in a closed Cadillac limpusine. In the picture above, the bodyguards of the two presidents in the front seat and on the special platform above the back bumpers can easily be identified by their worried looks.

American officials were more than reticent with information about the two presidential automobiles, which were flown in with the President's party. Even the driver in Jerusalem merely shook his head benevolently when our reporter asked him some very innocent questions about the shiny black Cadillac.

GM goes in big for small cars

NEW YORK (AP) - "Time" magazine reports that as part of a major revolution in the auto industry. General Motors hopes to sell 325,000 of its new line of small cars between next month's introduction and September.

"In the splashiest and costliest auto debut in history, GM on April 19 will start selling its new Compact X cars on which it has so far spent $2.5b.." the American news weekly reports.

It says the new cars weigh 2,500 pounds and have a wheelbase of 104 inches — or 800 pounds lighter and 20 inches shorter than the compact cars they are replacing. "Time" says the American car industry is undergoing a 'total revolution' in its rush to meet by 1985 "a series of sweeping and sometimes contradictory government regulations aimed at improving safety."

According to "Time," Japan's Takashi Ishihara, president of Nissan Motors, speaks of the American challenge as a war. He is quoted as saying: "We find ourselves on the eve of intense international competition with American automakers in the small car market, which hitherto has been the Japanese makers' stronghold."

Dangerous truckloads

By KINUE WEINSTEIN When is a safety hazard not a safety hazard? As long as it does not actually cause accidents. This seems to be the situation with regard to improperly loaded trucks. Many motorists have probably had the experience of driving behind a truck which either spills bits of dirt. gravel and even cement as it moves ong, or which looks as if it was about to lose some of its load. Some trucks carrying rocks, which do not have a tail-gate, seem to be especially dangerous, for a sudden stop might send part of their load down on the cars behind them. The fact that there have been no reported accidents makes the danger no less real. A traffic summons, however, can only be issued after part of the load has actually fallen from the truck.

There are, of course, regulations for the proper loading of trucks. David Yahin, of the Transport Ministry's Licensing Department, points out that these regulations have been on the books since Israel joined the UN Conference on Road Traffic in 1968, and they are in keeping with international standards. Their alm is to ensure that trucks are not overloaded and that their load is adequately secured.

For instance, the load may not press against the sides of a truck's box or extend over its sides. The load may extend the length of the truck by up to one metre in the front and back, but it must be clearly marked Moreover, the load must not block the driver's view or his vehicle's licence plate and turn signals.

Because of the many different truck designs, however, the laws are formulated in general terms and says Yahin, they are intended as guidelines for the drivers.

An official at the Trucking Board in Tel Aviv, when asked how much attention is paid to proper loading, replied that compliance with regulations is left to individual firms. The assumption is that all firms affiliated with the board follow the law, and that the police is the body responsible for enforcing the regulations.

Sgan-Nitzav Shmuel Bogler, head of the Traffic Department at National Police Headquarters, says that policemen are, instructed to issue summonses if they see anything falling from a moving truck. He admits, however, that enforcing the regulations concerning truck loading is not regarded as a high-priority matter. Bogler claims that to the best of his knowledge there were no accidents caused by spillage from trucks last year. Policemen are likely to ticket violations of loading regulations only if they happen to be behind an offen-ding truck. Bogler does point out, however, that any citizen may report such a violation to the police. Even if the potential danger of improper loading is not great, there is room to question the wisdom of a policy that waits for trouble to develop. A driver involved in an accident caused by falling dirt or stones will find little comfort in the knowledge that a summons will be issued after the fact.

INTERNATIONAL DEPT.

ONE FOR THE ROAD

How about the lowly pedestrian? In these mad times, when driving from one place to another involves one almost immediately in a bit of budgetary acrobatics - distance to destination divided by the car's fuel consumption per kilometre, plus allowances for that steep hill and heavy fuel consumption driving past the Kirya - not to mention wear and tear per kilometre, depreciation

WALKING IS CHEAPER

The biggest profit of all, if you walk enough, is that you discover one day that you can see your feet again, the paunch is almost gone and, by gum, you whistle while you walk! Sounds good - doesn't it?

WALKING IS HEALTHIER Let's start from the beginning: My doctor told me to walk. Prof. Ezra Zohar says it's good to walk. Only it seems that I live in the wrong place. Maybe if I lived in Haifa, or Jerusalem, where they have an energetic mayor...

WALKING IS MORE FUN It isn't as if the city fathers hadn't thought of the possibility that one fine day somebody might want to walk. Believe it or not - my hometown, south of Tel Aviv. at one time had fine pavements with shady trees and stone benches and fencedin plots. The streets were well lit. The founding fathers in their original blueprints even provided for a huge green belt to run the entire length of our community. There was a fine botanical garden nearby and shady eucalyptus trees, but, best of all, there were vast undulating sanddunes with century-old sycamores.

The sycamores were the first to "go." Pruned, finally uprooted, to give way to apartment houses. With them went the dunes. The botanical gardens were placed out-of-bounds to us city dwellers. (They belong to an agricultural school.) The pavements were narrowed down, the stone benches removed to yield to pizzerias and sellers of sesame and sunflower seeds. I've tried walking along a main road leading out of the city. But even at shubbut dawn the spluttering exhaust fumes of the cars, howling past, yielded more carbon monoxide within the hour than I had inhaled in a whole decade of shabbatot

The park was whittled down. What remains of it also accommodates an immense public library, an ugly chocolate-brown building. Most of the park isn't more than 20 metres wide. It peters out after a run of some two kilometres and degenerates (after an impassable natch) to become an asphalted footpath, leading nowhere and hemmed in by towering apartment houses.

People with weak bladders who want to cultivate the walking habit had better find themselves some likely bushes. There isn't anywhere a chap can relieve himself in the entire municipal area. Buying yourself a cup of coffee will only complicate the problem since most establishments haven't got a W.C.

One solution may be to go and buy some petrol. The petrol station at the city exit has a washroom (impossibly filthy). But it's a long way to whiep home a full jerrycan — especially if you don't need the petrol.

WALKING IS SAFER The traffic lights are all against the walker.

I have yet to find one in our town which allows you to cross the zebra stripes on one single green light. Usually they are cunningly timed to leave you tottering on the brink of a tiny traffic island, with gargantuan vehicles roaring in front and immediately behind you. Chances are that you'll wind up with a faceful of diesel fuel soot (it's not as harmful as the petrol exhaust). And you'd better hurry up if you don't want to get stuck with another red pedestrian light halfway across the road. That is - provided you can make it and there aren't some cars parked on what, according to the law is your zebra right-of-way. Driving school cars are particularly good at stopping on the zebra strip, but some bus drivers have also perfected the art. The trick seems to be hitting some innocent pedestrian with a sudden blast from a revved up engine just as he crosses (a) in front of the bus (b) in front of the engine covers, where the noise is loudest or (c) - and this is a real masterplece - to treat the pedestrian as he walks in front of the exhaust. The latter operation requires split-second timing, quick reflexes on the part of the driver, and excellent coordination. The driver has to look into the rear mirror to gauge the distance, step on the accelerator precisely at the right moment, make allowance for a twosecond interval between the engine

'goosing' it and its spluttering exhaust reaction.

There always remains walking at night. Say, around midnight, when vehicular and pedestrian volume has thinned out. The streets aren't swept yet and chances you will find yourself wading through a deep residue of greasy pizza wrappers (winter) or ice cream and sundries (summer).

After midnight you risk being picked up by the police for loltering. Be sure to wear light-fitting clothes, so you can raise your arms in a hurry when challenged. Don't — under any circumstances try to fish out your identity card first.

There there is the beach. But I came back with so many unmentionables glued to the soles of my shoes, that I had to quarantine that particular pair (my favourite) for over a fortnight. Smell was one of the reasons.

So now I'm back in my car again. I drive to a likely spot, lower the window and take a couple of quick sniffs before winding the windows up again.

My car does seven kilometres to

Top TWA mission to Jerusalem and Cairo

By HAIM SHAPIRO Jerusulem Post Reporter

Hard on the heels of renewed hopes for a peace treaty with Egypt. a high-level delegation of Trans World Airlines (TWA) is about to visit the two countries within a few

The group, due to arrive on Saturday, includes the entire board of directors of the international airline, as well as the president of Hilton International, a subsidiary of TWA. Although a private group, the delegation is being treated as if it were an official delegation, complete with visits to national sites and two banquets to which the top-level of Israel's officialdom have been in-

The first of the two dinners, on Saturday night, will include Prime Minister Menahem Begin, Deputy-Prime Minister Yigael Yadin and cabinet secretary Eliyahu Ben Elissar. The second dinner, on Sunday night, will be hosted by Foreign Ministry officials and Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek

Led by Curt Strand, president of the airline, the group will remain in Israel until Tuesday, when it will continue by direct flight to Cairo. Officially the purpose of the Cairo visit is to inaugurate the 900-room Ramses Hilton Hotel.

However, sources in Jerusalem speculated that whatever the stated purpose of the visit, the real goal would be to arrange for TWA flights touching at both countries. Feelers on the possibility of combined visits to Israel and Egypt have followed every renewal of the peace talks.

In reply to queries, Jerusalem Hilton public relations head Frank Nothman rejected suggestions that the visit was planned with a view to taking advantage of recent events.

Every year the TWA board meets outside the U.S., and Jerusalem was chosen this year, he said. One or two hotels are always included in the itinerary, in addition to the meeting site, and this year the choice fell on Egypt, he explained.

Bayside Land Corp. reports 134% increase in profits

By JOSEPH MORGENSTERN

Post Finance Reporter TEL AVIV. - The Bayside Land Corp. has released its annual report for 1978 which shows that net profits had risen by 134 per cent, to IL18.2m. The company, now celebrating its 50th year of operations, is part of the Property & Building Corp., which itself is part of the Discount Group. The company is active in the construction and leasing of industrial buildings. The total floor space of properties completed by the company or under construction now, is 135,000 sq.m. Its assets include bonded warehouses with a total area of about 5,000 sq.m. Bayside's total consolidated assets stood at IL124.1m. on December 31, 1978. This marked an 85 per cent increase over 1977. More than half of the total assets are represented by leased buildings, which are valued at

An evaluation of Bayside's land and other assets, made in May 1978, placed them at about IL280m. They are carried on the company's books at a value of IL60m.

Investments jumped from IL1.3m. to IL37.7m. They consist mainly of negotiable securities. Shareholders' equity stood at IL89.5m. and represented nearly three quarters of total liabilities. On the basis of the reported net profit the earnings per share are 44 per cent, as compared with 33 per cent in the previous year. The management of the company, whose shares are listed on the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange, is recommending that the 10 per cent cash dividend. paid in December 1978, be considered as final. Nesher's switch from oil to coal may have far-reaching consequences

By YA'ACOV FRIEDLER Jerusalem Post Beporter

HAIFA. - The Nesher Cement Company intends switching from oil to coal to fire the kilns in its Haifa and Ramle plants. This will help diversify the country's overall fuel needs. coming on top of the Electric Cor-poration's decision to use coal at its new Hadera plant.

Haifa port manager Moshe Haral confirmed yesterday that Nesher had already informed the port of its intention. The two cement plants will need about half a million tons of coal Haral said he would agree to handling the coal only if he could build a special jetty and covered unloading facility, which would prevent air pollution. The coal would be loaded on rail cars inside the facility. To make such a facility economical, however, it would have to have a much larger capacity than that required for the cement plants.

Experts see this as a development that may eventually help shift the coal handling for the new Hadera too. Once the Haifa facility would start operating and prove that it is not a pollution hazard for the town, objections to it would fall away.

The Jerusalem Post learned that some of the city fathers who were among the leaders of the fight against the Electric Corporation's plan to import coal through Haifa, are already having second thoughts about relinquishing the jobs involved to Hadera. It will be recalled that the campaign against the Haifa coal terminal was waged shortly before the municipal elections last November. It soon became a political issue, not based on reliable expert opinions.

For instance, experts from the Oceanographic Research Institute pointed out that Hadera unloading would be more likely to pollute Haifa's bathing beaches, due to the prevailing sea currents. But their findings were ignored.

At present the Electric Corporation plans to build a special off-shore unloading facility for the Hadera plant, which is scheduled to start operating at the end of 1980.

Health funds and tax evaders

By MACCABEE DEAN Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. - The greatest beneficiaries under the proposed National Health Law will undoubtedly be the 100,000 or more Israelis who pay either no income tax or who cheat on their income tax returns.

This is the opinion of Dr. Pinhas Nagel, director-general of Kupat Holim Maccabi, and of Zvi Katz and Heinz Breitenfeld, heads of the sick fund's financial and organizational departments, Kupat Holim Maccabi has 300,000 members and is Israel's second-largest sick fund. It is non-

"And the losers will be the hundreds of thousands of persons who earn salaries and who have their income tax deducted at source," they said. "The salaried workers will have to support the medical services of the income tax dodgers.'

At present, the officials pointed out, the sick funds have developed their own methods of checking up on a person's income and whether the member is paying honest dues.

"We don't collect our dues based on a person's declared income, but on his standard of living, Breitenfeld says. He added, "for example, a person who is living on reparations from Germany does not have to report this to the income tax

However, under the proposed National Health Law, the National Insurance Institute would collect the funds for the National Health Law.

The Insurance Institute would base the amount of money it collected from each person on his file in the income tax office. This method of collection is indeed cheaper than the methods used by the sick funds, but it is also ineffective - otherwise we would not have some 100,000 persons not paying honest income taxes, a state of affairs which the authorities have not been able to cor-

The speakers stressed that they were not against a National Health Law, only against the one which had been proposed by Health Minister Eliezer Shostak, which would cost untold millions - and create "medical chaos" - since it was planned to change the entire medical system overnight.

"We believe in evolution, not revolution," said Dr. Nagel. He added that "any health law should be introduced gradually, step by step, so it can be tested in actual practice, which often fails to correspond to the most beautiful theories."

The first step, he believes, would be to reorganize the hospital system and bring all the hospitals up to one standard in equipment, efficiency and facilities. Today, the kupat holim network is much superior to the government hospital network. Equalizing the standards would indeed cost immense sums of money. but the results would at least lead to the practice of better medicine.

Moreover, the present practice of hospitals refusing to accept tests done in the clinics (and often those done in another hospital) cost huge sums of money. "There is no reason for each test to be duplicated, just because a hospital doctor refuses to accept the results of a test ordered by a doctor in a clinic," Dr. Nagel

More millions would be poured down the drain by setting up regional networks. "The Ministry says that no more staff will be added, but so carried out without increasing administrative mannower.'

Dr. Nagel also found fault with the Health Ministry's plan to set up group practices, that is, a group of doctors, each a specialist working in a different field, who would accept patients. Today, a patient goes to his family doctor who treats him to the best of his ability, before referring him to a specialist. In the future, if the patient has direct access to a specialist, each specialist will only deal with a narrow segment of the patient's ailments (and many have more than one ailment). and then sent him to another specialist. This is a costly practice, and often not to the patient's best advantage, the speakers said.

The speakers also noted that the proposed law would deprive the present sick funds of their doctor-patient relationship, since the patient could jump from one doctor to another, or from one sick fund to another. 'This will eliminate the present system, under which the patient has a family doctor who will keep a watchful eye on him, no matter what specialist sees him,"

Dr. Nagel said. Dr. Nagel said.

Breitenfeld noted that the best evidence against the proposed law ." was what happened in England. although the systems are not exactly comparable. There, after a national health law was introduced, the existing private sick funds began to do a flourishing business, since they could provide better and more in-dividual care. Not only didn't the national health law in England not drive these private sick funds out of existence, but it even created new

Share influx of IL6b. next year?

Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA. — With an estimated IL&b. worth of shares entering the market next year, volume on the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange could reach a daily IL200m. turnover, Securities Authority chairman Yitzhak Taub said yesterday.

Speaking to bank managers who converged on the Shulamit Hotel here for their annual meeting, Taub said the authorities were expecting an additional 250 prospectuses on new issues for a total of some IL3b. in securities, most of which would be convertible.

"While the stock exchange is now in the centre of economic news and while the present government accords it a cardinal place in its economic philosophy, the changes in relevant legislation have been few since the present Securities Law went into effect in 1968," Taub said. He added that "experience shows that changes are needed which will make for stricter supervision and for adjustment to a modern capital market, as is the case in advanced économies...:

Taub called for laws enabling the Authority to conduct independent inquiries into companies whose shares traded on the exchange "whenever there is suspicion that the law has been violated." "Today the Authority must ask the police to investigate," Taub said. The proposed investigative powers of the authorities include the legal right to question specified persons, to demand explanations in writing and to show relevant documents. "The special situation here is that a lot of companies are in fact banks and their subsidiaries, which fear a violation of banking secrets. Regulations are needed that reconcile secrecy with the right of investigation, by making the position of some officers of the Authority similar to that of the Examiner of Banks with regard to their duty to uphold banking secret ,'' Taub said. Another problem not yet regulated by law is the ban on using inside information for operations on the stock exchange. 'This is admittedly a complex subject," Taub said, adding "it calls for a definition of what in side information, abuse and insiders are." The problem was also under study in England, he said.

A radical and specific Israeli solution is also needed for defining who is an adviser on securities, he said. advice is given across bank counters by, at the best, semi-qualified clerks. Their loyalty is to their employers, and their main task is not to advise. clients, but to sell.

It is hard for ordinary mortals like them to stand up to the conflict of interests between a vendor pushing a specific article and an objective adviser," Taub said. He added that he regarded as a minimal solution the: licensing of advisers and the creation of a professional body, with a code of ethics and qualifying examinations.

Recently, proposals have been made to make auditors liable for failing to disclose facts intended to mislead. The auditors objected to some of the proposals, "but it seems that the protection of the public requires such legislation, and the sooner the better." Taub said.

Exxon cuts oil supply to Japan

TOKYO (AP). - Exxon International Corp., the marketing arm of the world's biggest oil major, has notified some Japanese distributors of a 50 per cent oil supply cut in a half year period and a total cut after that, a trade source here said Tuesday.

The source said this was a big blow to Japanese importers who need every barrel of oil available but 'we're hoping that we can diversify import sources and cope with it."

The source said it will be Japan's third party distributors, other than Exxon's local affiliates, who will receive Exxon's supply cuts. Of about 240m. barrels of oil Exxon supplied to Japan in 1977, representing about 14 per cent of all oil im-ports, third party distributors handl-ed about one-third, the source said.

The source, calling it the "most drastic move ever taken by oil majors." said Exxon was to start cuts from April as its one-year contracts with third party distributors expire one after another.

The source, who declined use of name, said Exxon had explained that its global oil supply became tight after the Iranian situation.

Attempt to lure pensioners back to industrial production lines

By AARON SITTNER Jerusalem Post Reporter

Ways of getting penaloners back to work - either full-time or part-time - are under active study by a special committee of the Employment Ser-

According to Baruch Hakiai, director of the service, "the shortage of workers in many production industries has reached a critical point. We have therefore asked the Israel Pensioners Association, the Histadrut and other organizations to help us locate men between 65 and 70, and women between 60 and 65, experienced and in good health. They are badly needed to keep production going."

Haklai admitted that one of the obstacles in drawing retirees back to work is the so-called "conflict of payments" problem. This refers to certain maximum amounts of in-come a person may earn without forfeiting his right to full old age payments to which he is entitled under National Insurance.

These regulations discourage many pensioners from taking on jobs, he believes.

There are approximately 300,08 pensioners in the country, and b joining the civilian labour force the could help fill the 5,000-worker shot

Market rallies to optimistic peace news

TEL AVIV. - The rekindled hopes for an Egyptian Israeli peace treaty yesterday sparked a rally in the share market. Local investors were slow to react to the news emanating from Egypt and only in the latter part of the morning were the buy orders received

There is little doubt that many who had wished to risk their funds did not get their orders in on time and therefore it is likely that the rally will extend to today's session.

The index-linked bond market moved slightly higher but not meaningfully so. Gains were in the order of one half of one per cent. Today, the Central Bureau of Statistics is due rounce the index figure for February and financial observers and analysts are es timating a three per cent rise. Irregardless of the figure, there is little hope for a major reduction in the inflation spiral.

The March figure will also be probably inordinately high as a result of the average 39 per cent rise in fuel costs, and the April index figure will include wage likes scheduled by the government. An economist well acquainted with the or from the linder linked bond market pointed out yester-this will the day that the problem lies with the stem, indeed day that the problem lies with the a families a government's inability to actively light inflastem, under day that the problem lies with the a family of government's inability to actively fight inflationally of the lion. aimed at slowing down the pace, rather than attacking the problem at its roots.

In the meantime, those who recently made investment in shares saw their holdings appreciate in price.

Of the big three banks only Hapoalim (b) shares managed an advance. The shares rose by one point. Mizrahi (r) was heavily traded and gained two points. Union Bank was up by five while Israel General gained one. Mortgage Bank issues enjoyed one of the better sessions of this year. Carmel was up by 16 points. Tefahot gained 5.7 per cent while Ampal gained 10 points to 628. Insurance shares surged ahead convincingly. Aryth reached the 800 mark after rising 20 points. Phoenix IL1 at 425 reflected a rise of nearly six per cent. Motor House was ex-dividend and traded at ILI jumped by 14 to 853.

Land Development shares rose by some three per cent, on the average. Property and Building rose by seven to 333.

Neot Aviv did not trade yesterday and it will not be traded today. The decision to stop trading in these shares was taken as a result of a court decision to place the firm in receivership. The judgment came as a result of a petition made by contractor Aharon Rubinstein. In the petition the plaintiff claimed that majority shareholders were diverting profits made by Neot Aviv to a company conirolled by themselves. The court placed a three-month limit to have the judgment enacted.

Russco shares rose with the preferred advancing by seven and the ordinary by nine. Oil Exploration of Paz rebounded by three to 144. Industrials also performed well with gains ranging as high as five per cent. Ata "B" rose by 5.5 per cent. The Eisenberg and Piryon companies confirmed that negotiations were being held to sell part of their holdings in Ata to Teus and the investment company of Bank Hapoalim, Electra ILi was "buyers only" and fixed at 553. EWC was 7.5 points higher at 155.5. Petrochemicals gained 6.5 points to 119.5.

TOKYO: This pollution-free 550cc car uses liquid hydrogen instead of petrol as its fuel. The new-type automobile was unveiled last week by Prof. Shoici Furuhama of the Musashi Engineering University of Tokyo. Furuhama said the new system could become commercially viable if the containers holding liquid hydrogen could be massproduced. The mini car, equipped with a two-cycle engine, ran at a speed of 40 to 50 kph. but the professor said the speed could be increased to a maximum of 120 kph.

Volunteers make an important contribution to tourism industry

By BARUCH SAVILLE Post Travel Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The Voluntary Tourist Service (VTS) celebrates its 10th anniversary this month, and although few Israelis may have heard of the organization, its 600 members are providing a valuable — and free service to thousands of tourists who come here. Founded by Mrs. Tony Morgenstern, who thought she was going to "take it easy" when she came here from the U.S. the service aims at making tourists feel at home. Mrs. Morgenstern was taken aback by the fact that when she arrived in Israel there was practically no service aimed at the tourist especially the gentile — to make him feel at home here. She proceeded to found an organization that has perhaps done more for Israel's tourism image than any other. All the VTS services are free.

If the agriculture expansion goal is reached during Figueiredo's term, the two main economic problems of the Brazilian economy will be properly tackled. Inflation will drop to under 20 per cent and the sales abroad of agricultural items will contribute to improve the situation in the external accounts. Furthermore, the expansion of agriculture will considerably improve the distribution of revenue.

There has been much talk about the acute individual income differences in Brazil. In fact, there are major income differences not only among individuals but especially among regions, and these seem to be associated with the substantial growth of population. There is, however, enough evidence that in recent years the Brazilian development has improved the conditions of all the social layers in the country, mainly the poorest ones. Between 1972 and 1976, as the real average income of the richest 10 per cent of the country increased 14 per cent, the average income of the poorest 10 per cent in-

Work productivity, though rising, still low by world standards

By AARON SITTNER

The productivity rate of Israelis though quite low by world standards is improving, according to Dr. Israel Katz, Minister of Labour and Social Affairs.

Katz made the claim this week in a message of congratulations to the 12 winners of the Namir Prize for excellence in productivity. The award, named for Israel's second Minister of Labour - Mordechai Namir - is sponsored by the Histadrut.

While worker output in the U.S. is now rising by an annual rate of 1.2 per cent, said Katz, Israeli workers' productivity is growing by 3.6 per cent. Among industrial workers here the rate is even higher - 4.7 per

Israel has practically no natural resources, but its people represent its real national wealth, Katz said. Therefore, the country's economic power can be boosted only by such means as vocational training and retraining. He cited a demographic feature of Israel which, he said, makes it imperative for vocational training to be pushed even harder.

'In Israel," noted Dr. Katz, "a third of the population is below the age of 14, compared with only a fifth of the population in Western countries. This relatively larger nonearning sector in our population means that the working sector of the population must produce more per

Public order and the law

THE PROMISE of imminent peace with Egypt was certain to touch off a wave of violent protest among those Jews in Israel and Arabs in the territories who look upon it as a dire threat to their cherished aspirations. With President Carter's arrival in Jerusalem last Saturday night, this is just what happened.

Although Mr. Carter left for home two days ago, riots are continuing in a number of West Bank towns, complete with street demonstrations, tyre burnings and stoning of the military. Things have quietened down in Israel proper, but as the time for the signing of the treaty draws near, they may well take on an even uglier character than before.

Opponents of the peace in both camps share the conviction. voiced by a Gush Emunim theoretician, that "the lady is not for sharing." This Land, in other words, can either be all Jewish, or all Arab, but not both: and Jewish fundamentalism decrees that it should stay all Jewish. PLO chief Yasser Arafat spoke, paradoxically, in a similar vein for the West Bank rioters this week when he pledged "to fill the torch of revolution with fire and blood until the whole of the homeland, and not just a part, is liberated."

In their disparate ways both Rejectionist groups pose a grave threat to constituted authority. What is called for is a vigorous but measured response to their challenge.

Palestinians are entitled to think that their "legitimate rights" are insufficiently expressed in the scheme for selfgovernment. But they need not expect Israel to be terrorized into yielding them powers to be used for Israel's extirpation.

By the same token, the Jewish fundamentalist group centring around Gush Emunim cannot expect acceptance of their claim of divine right to define national policy in defiance of the will of

To be sure, Gush followers have not been engaging in outright organized terror: the country, after all, is ruled by their own kin. But some of their recent actions, especially, have had all the earmarks of patent lawlessness. Such have been their attempted assaults on the person of the U.S. president, and the brazen vigilante-type dispersal of the Ramallah demonstrations by settlers from Ofra, followed by contemptuous refusals to hand over their arms.

The security forces must discharge their responsibilities by disciplining the delinquents — without copying their methods. Public order must be preserved without trampling upon private

This may be a tall order, but the country cannot have anything less. Israeli democracy must not allow an occupation mentality to prevail in any area subject to its sovereign control. An example of conduct unbecoming of the armed forces is their strong-arm suppression of riots at Bir Zeit, which resulted in the "accidental" shooting of four Arab students. The appointment of a commission of inquiry on this case is welcome, but the commission will have wasted its time unless it makes sure that its findings are not a whitewash, and that they are forcefully acted upon.

A similar inquiry is surely called for into the wholesale and indiscriminate police arrest of suppposed Gush Emunim sympathizers as a preventive measure designed to assure Mr. Carter's safety. This was done on ostensibly legal grounds, for the penal code authorizes the police to detain any person for 48 hours on suspicion of his having committed or conspired to com-

According to all indications, however, the police completely disregarded the High Court's requirement that the conspiracy must be evidenced by more than mere preparation. The police were anxious to prevent any disruption of Mr. Carter's visit, and never mind the legal niceties.

This way lies the ruin of a law abiding society. Fire may be fought with fire, but illegality cannot be fought with illegality without breeding only more of the same.

TWO U.S. COLLEGE professors say they've found the answer to a famous mathematical problem, but they also say you don't want to know about it. The problem itself is difficult to state, and an explanation of the solution takes 25 pages, AP reports. The solution "may not be fully appreciated by the general public" said Helamana Ferguson of Brigham Young University,

"mathematicians who take a week or so to sort through it will see that it works.' Ferguson, a BYU associate professor, and Rodney Forcade, a visiting assistant professor from Southern Illinois University, described their accomplishment recently at American Mathematical Society meetings in Biloxi, Mississippi. The problem, which can be traced back nearly 2,000 years to Euclid, involves trying to find a systematic way to discover a relationship among irrational numbers, such as square roots and fractions.

Ferguson and Forcade began ago. Coming up with the solution did not depend upon computers, but working on the problem two years Ferguson said it helps to have one handy to apply it.

In two hours of computer work, the technique can be used on a group of numbers in a manner that would have taken 18th and 19th century mathematicians "trillions of centuries" to complete, Ferguson said.

"Based on the work we have done, we can see why other mathematicians failed to discover the solution." he said.

MAN IS sawing and hacking away at such a rate that every year an area the size of Cuba is denuded of trees, Reuter reports.

This is the conclusion of Worldwatch Institute, an organization partly funded by the UN which issues periodic research papers on economic development, environmental and related questions.

According to Erik Eckholm. author of the latest study, rampant forest destruction in the humid tropics has worldwide implications. threatening the extinction of thousands of plant and animal species over the next quarter-

Clearing the tropical forests might increase the carbon dioxide level in the atmosphere, changing the global climate. Eckholm, a leading environmentalist, said. While the forest area of North America and Europe was stable, at least 11 million hectares of Africa, Asia and Latin America are being denuded annually an area about the size of Cuba.

"MABAT" isn't the only news broadcast that sometimes fails to get the "bugs" out. On a recent Saturday night, the woman newscaster on Jordan TV's Hebrew news show was really bugged. A huge fly insolently flew onto her shoulder, walking up to her neck and buzzed for five minutes between her head and the camera lens. Even an attempt by a colleague in the studio to shoo it away with a piece of paper (clearly visible on the screen) was truitless. At the end of the show, the poor Hebrew newscaster looked very relieved. Was it a Jewish gadfly? J.S.

11th HOUR MOVE

DAVID LANDAU perceives "a bold exercise of leadership" by Prime Minister Begin in his final summit meeting with President Carter, but queries whether its results could not have been achieved months ago.

"THERE IS no escape from sum- is not supported subsequently by his mitry," Abba Eban MK said in The Jerusalem Post on this page on Tuesday. We cannot know whether Prime Minister Menahem Begin, one of our most loyal readers, had the time to absorb Eban's advice before setting out from his home to the King David Hotel for what was to be a fateful breakfast meeting with President Carter. Buf whether he read the advice or not, he took it.

"He showed real leadership -prime ministerial mettle," said a highly placed source, one of the few men who knew at the time of the dramatic breakthrough that was being achieved by the Prime Minister and the President.

This source, not one of Begin's aides, praised the Premier for "seeing the broad, historical perspective, discerning between vital issues and less consequential matters, holding out for the first and conceding the hour breakthrough is that the Prime Minister consciously stepped out ahead of his cabinet, and, during that breakfast meeting, treated and traded with Carter as one authoritative leader with another. Now of course there is a fundamental difference between the constitutional powers and position of an American president and a prime minister in a cabinet democracy of the Israeli (British-based) type. And yet, even in the cabinet system, there are moments when the prime minister must cease to be merely the chairman of a panel — the cabinet and assume a much more individual,

The basic truth behind the 11th-

The difference between the two systems manifests itself again if the prime minister's decision or action almost autocratic, responsibility.

The following is the text of President Carter's remarks at Andrews Air Force Base when he returned from the Middle East yesterday:

YOU ARE looking at a tired but grateful man. All of those who made this journey appreciate the oppor-tunity we have had to render some service in the cause of peace. Now the journey is done, and we are glad to be home - back in our own country, our beloved United States of America.

It's good to see so many familiar and welcome faces and I want to thank you for being out here in the middle of the night to give us one of the best welcomes back I think I have ever known. I thank you from the bottom of my heart.

As you know, we did not go to Egypt and Israel in order to confirm what was already a guaranteed result. We went there to use our influence and our good offices to help the leaders of those two great nations move decisively toward the peace that is so ardently desired by the people they serve.

cabinet, his party, and the majority of his parliament. Then, as Menahem Begin himself pointed out in his media interviews on Tuesday night, the prime minister must resign, bringing down the entire government with him. An American president does not require such ex post facto endorsement: and he cannot resign even if he feels that his move is not supported.

TUESDAY MORNING was one of those rare moments when a prime minister is required to act like a president — and face the risk of later paying the price inevitably exacted if such presidential-type decision-making is repudiated. Begin sensed the nature of the moment - and rose to it. Cyrics will say that he rose to it because he had no other choice, given the massive pressure inherent in the cliffhanging situation of the presidential mission. Be that as it may, the fact remains that he rose to it, and because he rose to it, we shall hopefully have a peace treaty with Egypt.

There is no doubt, according to informed sources, that the other cabinet ministers (barring Dayan, who, with U.S. Secretary of State Vance, sat in on part of the breakfast meeting) were not aware of the magnitude of the breakthrough that had been achieved. They, like the rest of us, were apprised of it only hours later, by President Carter's announcement on the tarmac of Cairo Airport.

They did not know, as they waved goodbye to Air Force One at midday, that the Premier had promised the President to submit to the cabinet an American guarantee-pledge in place of the Israeli demand for regular and direct oil supplies from Egypt.

(Begin's submission, as had been demonstrated the week before. following his Washington visit, is tantamount to a recommendation and his recommendation, as has been demonstrated throughout the peace process, is a virtual warranty of cabinet acceptance.) Only the night before this oil demand had been regarded by the cabinet as a sine qua non for the treaty. It was seen as a touchstone of Egypt's readiness, or reluctance, to engage in normal trade relations with Israel after peace. Similarly, they did not know that, after months of rejection, Begin had now signalled his acceptance of the Egyptian demand that Israel vacate El-Arish almost at once, and that it submit a detailed, binding schedule for its phased withdrawal from the rest of the "interim withdrawal" area. In return for this, President Carter indicated, Egypt would be prepared to restore its agreement to exchange ambassadors with Israel upon completion of the interim withdrawal.

(At this time of writing, it is still not clear whether the Prime Minister remained totally adamant in rejecting Egypt's demand for a "liaison office" in Gaza or whether here, too, he indicated a measure of compromise not previously approved by the cabinet. It is apparent. at any rate, that the Premier, despite the unique urgency of the situation, nevertheless held out firmly against the full brunt of the Egyptian demand, forcefully contending that it presented unacceptable political and strategic risks for Israel.)

WHILE APPRECIATING Begin's bold exercise of leadership qualities at a critical moment, many observers will now ask themselves

SERVING JUSTICE

The Post's DAVID KRIVINE discusses the recent reforms in administrative detention procedures and how they may be applied over the Green Line.

JUSTICE MINISTER Shmuel Tamir's promise to reform the procedure for administrative detention was passed into law on March 5. It is a good measure - except that it applies only to territory within the Green Line. Israel does not legislate for the administered areas.

Yet the problem of administrative detention - imprisonment without trial — exists primarily in the West Bank, where Arab terrorism is most rampant. It affects Israel hardly at Normally the procedure is for the military government to adopt the legislation passed by the Knesset and apply it in the administered territories at its own decision. This time informed circles are not at all sure that Defence Minister Ezer Weizman will give the order.

Administrative detention is allowed (for zones under military occupation) under the relevant international convention. The provision applied by the Israelis is the Emergency Defence Regulations dating back to British Mandatory

The view of the military is that prevention is better than cure. It is preferable to arrest the man before his bomb goes off than after. A law court will sentence him only after he has committed his crime. Administrative detention is a device for by-passing the court.

THERE ARE, of course, judicial safeguards, but they have been somewhat exiguous to date. A review board, presided over by an army judge or senior civil servant, examines each case once in six months and makes recommendations. Its proceedings are held in camera. The prisoner has the right to petition the High Court, but the court is unlikely to overrule the board unless it has committed a flagrant breach of the law or compromised the principles of natural justice. The whole device is not palatable. AGAIN AVAILABLE A HISTORY OF ISRAEL

The military should not have a quasiindicial power - indeed do they really need it? There are only about 20 such prisoners at the moment. There were never as many as 40. In a democratic society the law courts ought to have the last word on matters pertaining to personal rights and liberty. Is there really a case for making an exception to that rule, even during the present hard conflict with the PLO's murder gangs?

The new law does not abolish administrative detention, but it does make a number of welcome changes. It vests the prerogative to detain without trial, hitherto held by the Chief of Staff or the Area Commanders. in the hands of the Defence Minister personally. He (to quote the bill's explanatory note: "Will of course bear full parliamentary responsibility for his actions."

More important, any dentention order put out by the Detence Minister 'shall be submitted for the approval of the President of the District Court within 48 hours: if the hearing before the President has not begun within those 48 hours, the detainee is to be released."

THE DEFENCE Minister may not order detention for a period ex-ceeding six months. If he wants to prolong the arrest he must go through the same procedure with the District Court all over again, The President of the District Court must review the detention order at least once every three months, and may do it more often if he thinks it

The hearings are still in camera. On the other hand the detained person has the right to be present. He also has the right of appeal against the court's decision to a judge of the Supreme Court.

The Defence Minister will have to satisfy the bench not just that the detention is expedient for the maintenance of military security, as under the existing regulations, but that it is the only means of achieving that objective. A plea that the man's imprisonment helps to suppress a riot or rebellion will not suffice per sc. The decision must have been "necessary to prevent injury to the security of the state or the public."

Moreover, detention must be the only means whereby the security purpose can be achieved. If it should be possible to accomplish the same objective in any other way, e.g., by restricting the movements of the person in question, then the issue of a detention order is no longer permissi-

The importance of this reform is that a person arrested for being an enemy of the state will have recourse to a court of justice. The court will set the detention order aside if it is persuaded that "the reasons for which the Minister of Defence made the order were not objective reasons of state security or public security. or that the order was made in bad faith or out of irrelevant considerations."

IN CONSIDERING whether to extend this new order to the West Bank and Gaza, it should be borne in mind that the bill does not have to be reproduced textually. The courts exercising the stated functions could not be the civilian district courts, for a start. Use would have to be made of the military courts; and there is no appeal from their verdicts.

As it happens, the idea of setting up a military appeals court has been un-der discussion for some time. The opportunity could be taken of killing two birds with one stone - by creating a military appeals court, which should serve the administrative detainees as well.

Under the new law, Israeli nationals may not be deported, nor can they be denied admittance into the country. This clause too may be difficult to apply rigidly to the residents of the territories; but that is not a reason for shelving the whole measure. The question Weizman must consider is this: If the bulk of the provisions in the above new law are adopted by the military government, will the security service be seriously handicapped in their work? Will the tightened judicial control have a negative effect on their efforts to defuse terrorist activities?

That is the only issue to consider. There is no other justification for failing to humanize a process which. however necessary the military may consider it, is basically uncivilized.

READERS' LETTERS

A DEBT TO HADASSAH To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, - During the 14 years I have been in Jerusalem, mostly with the United Nations, I have heard and read paeans of praise and appreciation bestowed on Hadassah Hospital for its dedicated healing services to patients irrespective of their race, colour or faith. I was recently able to see with my own eyes Arab patients from Damascus and Kuwait given the same devoted treatment as Israeli patients. Hadassah's healing processes literally cover the whole of the Middle East and beyond and they have recently reached a far-away country like Burma by treating my wife for lung cancer during the last seven months. My wife was operated on 25 June, 1978, and chemo-therapy was administered throughout the entire seven months she was in Jerusalem.

Right from the very beginning, was a hopeless case. But the docti who treated her never gave up this hope of prolonging her life to the tent possible in such cases. The di tors, the interns and the kind many a seof the entire Oncology Department were unstinting in their devoted at 2 and 2 vices to make my wife's few remaining months of life as comfortable

SEX COUNSELLING IN JERUSALEM

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post Sir. - In the past few weeks, Mr. Haim Shapiro has published reports relating to the problems of sex counselling in Israel and particularly in Jerusalem. I beg to differ with Mr. Shapiro in respect to some of his statements regarding the availability of sexual counselling in Jerusalem. Among others, he states in his article of February 7 that "there is no public clinic for sexual problems in Jerusalem."

Hadassah, as a pioneer in most areas of medical care in Israel, over 10 years ago started a clinic in cooperation with the departments of psychiatry and gynaecology. The late Professor Z. Polishuk and myself initiated this cooperation between the two departments, which then developed into a psychosomatic and family counselling clinic dealing with all the aspects of sexual, marital and family problems. The clinic has been well known to the medical community of Jerusalem: many referrals are made by family physicians and others who are in need of advice come directly after having consulted their family doc-

Jerusalem. ELECTRICITY FINES

To the Editor of The Jeruralem Post Sir. — It is unbelievable that a committee of economic ministers could propose the imposition of fines for consumption of more than 200 kwh of electricity per month. Your correspondent Asher Wallfish rightly uses the word ludicrous for the
